// Core Questions

1. Which way do you usually swing when acting out of an identity that is apart from what God says is true about you? Helplessness or controlling?
2. What are the messages or lies you hear in your head that cause you to live out of that place? From where might those have come?
3. Where is an area in your life or world that you have the opportunity to influence that you may not be fully utilizing?
4. What are the risks you foresee in speaking up and using your influence?
5. As Lindsey asked, “what have you have decided is too far down that river for you to get back”?
6. How might God be calling you to be BRAVE in that particular situation, despite the risks?

// Challenge

Take some time this week to think and pray about where in your life you are not using your influence properly. Where are you not trusting God? Where are you taking things into your own hands? Where are you keeping quiet when you could be speaking up? Pray that God will reveal these things to you. Then, think of one small, measurable step you can take this week to move toward living the influence you were called to live. Make sure it is something you can measure; you should know whether you did it or not. For example: saying “I am going to ask my husband about _____ by Saturday” is measurable. Saying, “I am going to speak up for myself more” is not. Share whatever it is you come up with your group so that they can help support you in completing it.
